PANNA NATIONAL PARK

It is a vast plateau dominated by tropical forests, deep ravines, cascading waterfalls and thick teak forests. The terrain is largely rocky with mixed dry deciduous forests. Panna National Park is the most important protected area in the north central highlands as it links the eastern and western populations of resident wildlife, and can be a base to explore Khajuraho. Panna is located a mere 12 kms from Khajuraho.

KHAJURAHO

Set against the backdrop of the jagged Dantla hills, Khajuraho, approximately 45 km away (a 1-hour drive) from the lodge has immaculately restored temples and monuments that exemplify the glory of days gone by.

The temples built of sandstone subtly change hues until they glow white when the moon is out in the evenings. With its delicate sensuality, the sculptures showcase exquisite intricacy reflecting the incredible skills of the artisans. While only twenty-five of the estimated eighty-five temples built remain standing, there is an air of timelessness about the place. Built between the tenth and twelfth centuries AD during the Chandella dynasty, the temples of Khajuraho beckon.

The village of Khajuraho, which is dotted with hotels and little trinket shops, quietly basks in the shadow of the temples. While Khajuraho certainly is the main attraction near Pashan Garh, another place to enjoy spending leisurely afternoons is Panna town. Famous for its diamond mines, Panna is home to innumerable historic temples that strike a fine balance between Hindu and Islamic influences. Far removed from the hustle and bustle, Panna is a quaint old town of little bazaars where locals trade adding to the charm of the place. The temples, Khajuraho village and Panna town are certainly some of the places to visit while at Pashan Garh.

FLORA

Dry, hot climate and shallow windhyan soils gives rise to dry teak and mixed forest. The dominating vegetation type is dry, deciduous forest interspersed with grassland areas. Other major forest types are riverines, open grasslands, open woodlands with tall grasses and thorny woodlands. Beautiful bamboo also occurs on the hilly slopes and gorges.

FAUNA

Panna is home to the majestic Bengal Tiger, as well as the sloth bear, leopard, wolf, hyena, jackal, wild dog and crocodile. The reserve is also well known for sightings of nilgai, sambar, chital and wild boar. There are over 250 species of birds, including a host of migratory birds. One can see white necked stork, head fish eage, honey buzzard, king vulture, blossom headed parakeet, paradise flycatcher, Peregrine Falcon Areal to name a few.
